LONDON, SATURDAY, April 29, 1732.

HELI, the Turkiſh Traveller, to OSMYN a Phyſician at the Porte; on Suicide.

THO' I am ſo far diſtant from my Friends, I am not unmindful of the Pleaſure I have enjoy'd in their Converſation; neither does my Intercourſe with Strangers make me leſs deſirous of ſeeing it renew'd: An old Friend is like a Mine of Gold, always valuable, and never exhauſted, a new Acquaintance is only current Coin, that paſſes from Hand to Hand; a common Property, that as a Chriſtian Poet very well expreſſes it, was mine, is yours, and has been Slave to Thouſands. Thou art a Mine of Gold to me, and thy Letters, fraught with the Wiſdom of the Orient, are as welcome to my Hands, as the Treaſures of the Indies: I never receive thy ineſtimable Packet without a Flow of Pleaſure, that nothing but thy own Preſence could increaſe: Thy Letters are a Part of thee, they are a Tranſcript of thy Soul, and a rich Fund of Knowledge to mine. I write to thee only to thank thee for thy laſt Diſpatch, and deſire another; conſcious of being unable to preſent thee with any Thing equivalent, in Return for thy ſublime Correſpondence. If I can furniſh thee with any Entertainment, it muſt be owing to the Novelty of it, and I muſt confeſs I care not to expoſe my Genius to thy formidable Inſpection without ſome ſuch Charm to blind thy Penetration, and ſkreen my Defects from thy Cenſure.——I write to thee now upon Suicide, not the Suicide of the antient Romans, either the Virtuous who dy'd to preſerve their Liberty, or the Wicked who did the ſame to avoid Ignominy, and Puniſhment; but Suicide that ſeems a national Diſeaſe, a Sort of conſtitutional Phrenzy, which has taken Place ſo frequently, that even the very People themſelves who are moſt liable to it, I mean the Engliſh, ſtile it Lunacy, and think they owe the Infection to their Climate. Let it ariſe from what Cauſe it will, there is no Nation in the World, where it ſo often happens; not a Week paſſes without two or three Inſtances in ſome Shape or another; the Sword, Poiſon, Halter, and Piſtol are alternately applied, and neither Youth, nor Age, Man, or Woman, Rich, or Poor, are exempt from the melancholy Contagion. You ſhall ſcarce meet with a ſingle Family that has not loſt a Friend, or Relation in this deplorable Manner, and they are ſometimes attended with ſuch tragical Circumſtances, as make the Heart bleed with Compaſſion at the bare Recital. Not many Days ago, a Man, and his Wife who were embarraſs'd in their Affairs, and knew not how to extricate themſelves, mutually reſolv'd to die together, and end all their Misfortunes at a Blow. They had a Child too, a tender Infant in the Cradle, and the Woman was big with another; affecting Circumſtances which would have mov'd any leſs reſolute Perſons to live for their Sakes! But this was ſo far from influencing them in that Manner, that it haſten'd the Execution; they could as ill bear their Children ſhould be unhappy as themſelves, and therefore concluded to ſnatch them from Miſery by the ſame violent Means. Even the weeping dying Mother could conſent to ſee her little Darling murder'd before her Eyes to ſave it from Ignorance, and Want; nothing can be imagin'd more pathetick than this tragical Scene, the Horror, and Reluctance of the agonizing Parents, feeling more than Death in becoming the Murtherers of their Child, and the Pangs of parting with each other, Pangs ſo great that Death himſelf, ſo formidable to others, was a Relief to them: They firſt ſhot the ſleeping Innocent thro' the Head, and then hang'd themſelves at a ſmall Diſtance from each other, with a Curtain drawn between, that they might not be Witneſs to each other's Agonies. They left Letters behind them, wherein they declar'd the Motives of this Tragedy, and not only told the Cauſe, but us'd many Arguments to excuſe, and palliate the Deed. An Impatience of Poverty, a Contempt of Dependency, ſeem'd to be the Motives, and a natural Antipathy to Pain, and inbred Deſire to be free from it, were made the chief Apologies in their Favour; from hence they concluded they had a Right to prevent their future Misfortunes by Death, and that eternal Happineſs would be the immediate Conſequence. Accompliſh'd Oſmyn! Thou who art ſo converſant with the human Frame, and ſo intimate with the ſecret Springs of Nature, wilt beſt reſolve the Cauſes of this melancholy Madneſs, and why it ſhould immediately belong to the Engliſh Nation in Reſpect to their Climate and Air; but allow me to inform thee of ſome Circumſtances of the Temper of the People, and it may help to make thy Concluſions more juſt——The Engliſh are a People by their own Laws, and Conſtitutions equal and free: Titles of Honour, and Largeneſs of Property, is the only Difference between Man and Man, and if ſome greater Privileges are annex'd to thoſe in high Life, thoſe in low are equally protected in theirs, and admit of no Inſult from their Superiors. The Word Freeman levels the whole Nation, and the meaneſt among them are ſo vain of this Diſtinction, that they look down with Contempt on a Slave of Quality: It gives a Pride and Fierceneſs to their whole Behaviour, makes them apt to aſſume, and impatient of Submiſſion; makes them aſpire to every Thing above them with Eaſe, and ſtoop to any Thing beneath them with Difficulty, and Pain. This makes them the worſt Servants in the World, and, as each thinks his Merits as great as his Maſter's, he is never eaſy in Subjection; tho' 'twas his own Choice: This Pride too makes them expenſive, and, the more expenſive they are, the more unfortunate; Ill-Fortune puts their Spirits on the Fret, and the Gloom of their Climate is an additional Weight that ſinks them into Deſpair at once, and Death is the only remaining Cure. This is the peculiar Situation of the Engliſh; I'll now treſpaſs on thy Patience in ſpeaking my Opinion freely of the Deed itſelf, and of the Arguments that are us'd to render it lawful and expedient. The common Reaſons for Suicide are as various as the Circumſtance of the Perſons; ſome, merely fatigu'd with Life, and ſick of a dull tedious Round of Action, that had no longer any Variety to recommend it, have voluntarily courted Death, as a ſound Sleep, wherein every Thing would be forgot; or new Dreams afford new Entertainment: Some that have liv'd happily, and had only a Proſpect of ſome approaching Misfortune to interrupt the Tranquility of the Scene, have choſe to end it abruptly, rather than ſuffer ſo diſagreeable a Change. Some that have been really, and eſſentially unhappy, have look'd on Death as the only End of their Miſery, and therefore a Friend they could not be acquainted with too ſoon. All imagine their Lives their own, and conſequently to be diſpos'd of as they pleaſe; that Life is not worth enduring, and Death not capable of rendering them more miſerable. That 'tis brave, and heroick to anticipate a Period that could never be avoided, and triumph over Death rather than let the World inſult them: That GOD would conſider ſuch an Action as the Dictate of Nature, and forgive what Neceſſity juſtified; that in Caſe of an Immortality, Happineſs would be the certain Conſequence, and in Caſe of Annihilation, Inſenſibility of Pain. Every Way 'tis ſuppos'd they are Gainers, and therefore 'tis prudent, as well as brave to behave accordingly. Theſe are the common Reaſons for this Deed of Horror, but ſurely nothing can be more fallacious, or abſurd; if there are any who can be really tir'd of Life, merely becauſe 'tis the ſame Farce play'd over and over, to them I anſwer, that they reaſon from Ignorance, rather than Knowledge; ſince Nature is infinitely various, and can afford a wiſe Man eternal Entertainment. If the Happy would ruſh on Death the Moment they ceaſe to be ſo, they behave moſt ungratefully to Providence, that had ſo long ſcreen'd them from the Calamities which are the very Conditions of our Being. If the perfectly Unhappy conſider Death as their laſt and great Phyſician, and fly to him for a Cure, they diſtruſt the Goodneſs of the Almighty, and fruſtrate the very End of the Adverſities we feel, which are only in Viſitation of our Follies, or to awaken us to the Practice of Virtue, which is the only Happineſs. But nothing can be more trifling than to call this Madneſs Bravery, or eſteem it Courage to die, rather than ſuffer Pain. He that acts in this Manner is no better than a Coward; he flies from the very Enemies he was created to combat with, and deſerts the Poſt he ſhould have maintain'd with Honour: Beſide, in my Opinion it argues the nobleſt Spirit to ſtruggle with the Difficulties that weak Minds only think inſurmountable, and he who ſhortens his Days to avoid them is abundantly leſs brave than he who behaves with Reſolution under them, and ſuits his Mind to his Condition. I ſay nothing of the future Happineſs of theſe miſtaken Creatures; the Almighty is infinitely good, as well as juſt, and will have Mercy on the Frailties of human Nature, tho' 'tis not in our Power to conclude either Way. But theſe People fly from Pain; Pain, they ſay, is an inſupportable Evil, and yet, as delicate as they are themſelves, they have no Compaſſion on others, and, to give themſelves Eaſe, leave their Families, and Friends miſerable; miſerable for them, and made ſo by that very Deed, which they meant for their own Relief. Every good-natur'd Man, I am poſitive would think this a ſufficient Motive alone to diſſuade him from ſuch Conduct: If not, how would he anſwer it to Society? Whatever is lawful for one Individual, is free to all, and if all ſhould follow the ſame Courſe, as all have as equal Right, the World would ſoon be a Deſart, and all the Luminaries of Heaven ſhine in vain. Adieu my Friend, and may our holy Prophet defend us from a Folly that would blemiſh our Lives here, and indanger our Happineſs hereafter!

A new Ship belonging to Bristol and others were lost at the same Place.

Extract of a Letter from Lisbon, dated the 22*d Inst.* N. S.

Capt. Brookes is arrived here, whose Ship the Leghorn-Galley coming from Sicily was lost the 27th of Dec. last in the Gulph of Extora in Barbary, where himself and People got safe on Shore, but were seized by the Moors (which in that Part of the Coast are independent both of Algier and Tunis) who carried them away as Slaves into the Mountains, where they were happily met by an Italian, who generously ransomed them all for 145 Pieces of Eight. But the Bulk of this great Estate is limited to the Heirs Male of the Daughters of a Kinsman of his and Names-Sake; a Farmer in Essex or Suffolk, whose Son, for whom this Estate was designed, died not long since.

Lasswade, Scotland, April 17. T'other Day a Man on Horseback, with a young Woman behind him and a Child in her Arms, came here, by the Edinburgh Road, and stopt at the House of Mr. Pinkerton, School-Master here. The Woman call'd for Mr. Pinkerton, and begg'd him to take the Babe, in Order to have it warm'd at his Fire, and that they would alight for an Hour and drink a Pint of Fresh with him: Which our Dominy had no sooner done, but the fallacious Couple put Spurs to the Galloper, and rode off. The good Man roar'd after them, What, won't you take your Infant along? Mamma replied, We go to fetch you a Nurse. He bid them be quick in returning, and in the mean Time carried the Child into his House; and while they were opening the Child before the Fire, (in Presence of some Neighbours who came to congratulate him on Account of his young Guest) they discover'd a Label pin'd on its Breast, with this Inscription, I am your Grandson, by your Son ——; and this my Billet will entitle me to make good my Quarters till the Nurse come!

'Tis advised from Spain, that the Captain General of the Expedition, the Conde Montemare was expected at Alicant the 16th Inst. at Night, N. S. when all the General Officers would be there present: That the Galicia Man of War arrived there the Day before with 26 Transports from Cadiz: That they were so very strict in embargoing all Ships there, that a Dutch Ship of 400 Tons bound from Legborn for Amsterdam, and the Amity, Ashburn, bound from Falmouth to Legborn, having put in there, had been obliged to unload, and enter into the King's Service; occasioned by the French and Italian Barques and Tartans and others having fled, disliking the Spanish Measurement and Terms, on which they obliged Ships to serve them, and which put them in great Want of Transports, particularly for carrying their Horse. It is written from Cadiz the 15th Inst. N. S. That on the 9th the Galicia, a Man of War of 70 Guns sailed from thence for Alicant with a Fleet of 26 Transports, five of which were French, three Dutch, one Sweed, and 17 British; and it is added that the utmost Diligence was used to dispatch another Fleet after them, but that the Terms on which they were forced into the Service were not agreeable. The Order was come for delivering the Cochineal, Indigo and other Effects brought from La Vera Cruz by Don Espeletta's Ship, upon paying 9 per Cent. Indulto, which, with other Charges will come out at about 15 per Cent. A few Days ago the America, Crony, stopt off this Port, but hearing of the Embargo proceeded for Leghorn.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Hague, April 4. N. S.

THE Emperor ſeeing himſelf, as it were, between two Fires, threaten'd on the Side of Turky, and not ſecure on that of Italy, is reſolved to take all the Precautions in his Power to prevent the fatal Effects of theſe ill Omens. His Imperial Majeſty has therefore renewed his Orders for compleating the Fortifications of Belgrade and Temeſwaer; thoſe important Places, which cover the Kingdom of Hungary, and even the Capital of the Empire itſelf: And the Imperial Miniſters are daily ſending down the Danube all Sorts of Ammunition and Proviſions, to ſtore the Magazines of thoſe Fortreſſes, and enable them to ſtand any Shock the Ottomans can give them: For it is unqueſtionably true, that there are certain Powers of Chriſtendom, not more Chriſtian than their Neighbours, who are continually baiting the Prime Vizir to ſignalize his new Miniſtry by a vigorous War with the Emperor of the Romans. This would make a powerful Diverſion indeed, if France and Spain have formed the Deſign to attack any of the Emperor's Dominions in Italy: But whether they have or have not, there is Reaſon to believe, the Rebels of Corſica have been ſupported by thoſe two Crowns; and therefore his Imperial Majeſty has ordered a new Reinforcement thither, with a good General at their Head; chuſing rather that that Iſland ſhould remain as it is, than that it ſhould add any new Title to the Poſſeſſions of the Infant Don Carlos. Moreover, they are very uneaſy at the Imperial Court, to know whether that young Prince will receive the Inveſtiture of the Duchies of Parma and Placentia of the Pope, according to his Holineſs's Offer: But if we may credit ſome Advices, he does not deſign to receive that Inveſtiture either from the Pope, or the Emperor. The Recalling of the Turkiſh Aga, Conſul for the Ottoman Port at Vienna, is no great Sign neither, of the Continuation of the good Intelligence between the two Empires. That Miniſter is very apprehenſive of being inſerted in the Turkiſh Mattyrology, upon his Arrival at Conſtantinople; not that he is conſcious of having done any Thing to deſerve it; but he fancies ſome Body has been doing him ill Offices in the Grand Seignior's Court. Beſides the Title of Chariſſimo Fratri, which the Infant Duke gave the Emperor, upon the Superſcription of his Letter, he added the Word Sereniſſimo inſtead of Auguſtiſſimo: But the ſaid Letter was ſent back, and Don Carlos was given to underſtand, that the Imperial Court could not help being diſpleaſed with ſuch Sort of Treatment, which was not at all becoming a Prince dependent upon his Imperial Majeſty: That they looked upon it, however, as a pardonable Miſtake for the firſt Time; but that they would receive no more Letters ſo directed. We are told that the Infant Duke, in his Letters to the Princes of Italy, has likewiſe given them Titles no Ways ſuitable to their Dignity; whereupon they have alſo ſent them back without opening. Private Letters from Leghorn aſſure us, that the Spaniards have at leaſt 12,000 Men in Porto-Longone and that Neighbourhood. The Miniſter of the Republick of Genoa at the Court of France, having now no Support, ſince the Departure of Count Kinſki, the Imperial Ambaſſador, all his Negotiations are to no Purpoſe, and the Affairs of his Republick are in a very bad Way. This is plain from the Inſinuation that has been made to him, that the Genoeze have not given the Crown of France the Satisfaction ſhe requires; for that the moſt Chriſtian King could not think their Embaſſy a ſufficient Atonement for the Affront they had put upon his Colours: That as for the Iſland of Corſica, the Senate of Genoa cannot but know they hold it by no other Title than that of Conqueſt; but that the Court of France could put in a juſter Claim, if Occaſion ſerved. In ſhort, that Miniſter knows no more which Way to turn himſelf in this arduous Conjecture, than his Republick. The Spaniards ſtill affect to give out, that their Armament is deſigned againſt Africa; but our Politicians disbelieve them to a Man. The Preparations are (in their Judgment) too great for an Enterprize of ſo little Importance. Beſides, France, who is likewiſe equipping 12 Men of War at Breſt and Toulon, is certainly to join the Spaniſh Squadron; and it is even ſaid, that Monſieur du Gué Trouin will command in Chief. It was undoubtedly the better to conceal their true Deſign, that the Court of Spain ſent one of their beſt Engineers to the Coaſt of Barbary: But all this Riddle will ſoon be unfolded.

Paris, May 3. N. S. Letters from Barcelona of the 12th ult. adviſe, that the Fleet waited only for the laſt Orders from Court, to put to Sea. Meſſire Charles Lewis-Auguſtus le Tonnelier de Breteuil, Biſhop of Rennes, Abbot of St. Peter de Chaunes, and Maſter of the King's Chapel of Muſick, died in his Dioceſe the 24th paſt, in the 44th Year of his Age. Meſſire Joſeph de Gaſquet, Major-General of the King's Armies, and Commander of the Royal and Military Order of S. Lewis, died at Agen the 12th, aged 93 Years.

Leghorn, April 12. N. S. Several Veſſels arriv'd here lately from Corſica, the Maſters whereof report that five arm'd Genoeſe Barks had ſurpriz'd and put Fire to a French Veſſel upon the Coaſt of that Iſland near Girolata, pretending that ſhe furniſh'd the Rebels of that Iſland with Proviſion and Ammunition of War.

Genoa, April 12. N. S. 'Tis aſſured, that the Prince of Wurtenberg, Commander in Chief of the Imperial Auxiliaries in the Iſland of Corſica, has Orders from the Emperor to uſe the Rebels of that Iſland with Mildneſs and Moderation, and offer his Imperial Majeſty's Mediation, and even that Monarch's Guaranty for an Accommodation, and its punctual Obſervance on the Part of this Republick before he proceeds to Extremities, if he finds that the ſaid Rebels are any Ways inclin'd to ſubmit themſelves to their lawful Sovereigns upon reaſonable Terms.

Our Senate has receiv'd certain Advices from that Iſland, that the Rebels had ſummon'd all the Natives that are able to bear Arms, to repair to their Camp on Pain of Death, and having their Poſſeſſions deſtroy'd by Fire if they diſobey'd their Summons; and that they unanimouſly bound themſelves by Oath not to accept the Accommodation offer'd them by our Senate upon any Terms whatſoever, being reſolv'd to contend for their Liberty to the Effuſion of their laſt Drop of Blood.

Vienna, April 19. N. S. Some Advices import, that the Inhabitants of Final had form'd heavy Complaints againſt the Republick of Genoa, and that they reſolv'd to addreſs themſelves to the Emperor, and ſupplicate him to be pleaſed to maintain them by his Authority in their Rights and Privileges.

Ratiſbon, April 24. N. S. The Miniſter of the King of Great Britain, as Elector of Hanover notified to the Evangelick Body, that the King his Maſter had order'd a general Collection throughout his German Dominions to be made for the Relief of the poor Proteſtants of Saltzbourg, who are forc'd to leave their Native Country on Account of their profeſſing the Proteſtant Faith; and that that Monarch contributed the Sum of 3000 Rixdollars, to make the intended Relief the more extenſive to ſubvene their neceſſitous Condition.

Hamburgh, April 29. N. S. A Collection for the Relief of the Proteſtant Satzburghers has been Yeſterday made in the five principal Churches in this City, which amounted to 10,000 Rixdollars.

Extract and Tranſlation of a Letter from ſome Palatines who took Paſſage at Roterdam in June 1731, for Philadelphia.

Captain Labé made an Agreement with us in Rotterdam to carry us in his Ship to Philadelphia, and to provide ſufficient Victuals for ſuch a Voyage: But we apprehend, from the whole of his Conduct, that he rather intended to ſtarve and deſtroy us all, and make himſelf Maſter of our Effects. We were 24 Weeks at Sea, becauſe when we had the faireſt Wind, the Ship ſailed only in the Day-time. We had bought at Worms (for our common Uſe) a conſiderable Quantity of Rheniſh Wine, which when we came to Sea, we underſtood was ſtowed where we could not come at it. The laſt eight Weeks we had no Bread at all, and a Pint of Grots was the Allowance for five Perſons per Day. In great Diſtreſs of Hunger and Thirſt we went all together to the Captain, and petitioned that we might have ſome of our Wine wherewith to refreſh ourſelves: At laſt, in a great Rage, he threw us the Key of the Hold, but ſent nobody with us to ſhew us where the Wine lay: After long ſeeking, we found ſome of our Casks; but the Bungs had been drawn out, and the Wine all taken away; and when we asked the Sailors what was gone with it, we received no Anſwers but Curſes. The Hunger became at length ſo grievous, that 18d. was given for a Rat, and 6d. for a Mouſe, and we ſometimes could get no Water for ſeveral Days but at 6d. a Quart. Seven Perſons died of Hunger and Thirſt in one Night, and were thrown naked into the Sea without any Thing to ſink them, nor durſt we ask any Thing of the Sailors, becauſe upon the leaſt Occaſion we were beat and kick'd, and uſed like Slaves or Malefactors. Of 150 Paſſengers, who came on board at Rotterdam, above 100 have been miſerably ſtarv'd to Death.
